Dear Chairman Sanders, Chairman Miller, Ranking Member Burr, Ranking Member Michaud, Chairman Harkin and Ranking Member Alexander:

We, the undersigned Attorneys General, write in support of the Protecting Financial Aid for Students and Taxpayers Act sponsored by Senators Kay R. Hagan of North Carolina and Tom Harkin of Iowa. This important legislation is a vital first step to curb abusive and deceptive recruiting and marketing practices by the for-profit education industry. By prohibiting the use of federal funds for student recruitment and marketing purposes, this bill will ensure that scarce federal education dollars will be used to serve and educate students rather than to finance advertising campaigns, recruitment operations and aggressive marketing.¹

Currently thirty-two (32) state Attorneys General are participating in a multistate working group investigating the for-profit schools industry. Several of us have taken action against companies that we allege have violated our state consumer protection laws. We continue to investigate these companies and anticipate additional actions to be filed in the future.

The Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions (HELP) Committee analyzed data submitted by the for-profit school industry and found that large for-profit colleges with troublingly high student withdrawal and loan default rates use an exorbitant amount of federal aid on advertising, marketing and recruitment.

According to the HELP Committee’s July 2012 Report:

- 15 of the largest for-profit education companies received at least 86 percent of their revenues from federal student aid programs such as the G.I. Bill and Pell grant programs.
- In Fiscal Year 2009, these for-profit education companies spent $3.7 billion dollars or 23 percent of their budgets, on advertising, marketing and recruitment which was often very aggressive and deceptive.
- Together, the 30 education companies examined by the HELP Committee spent $4.2 billion on marketing in 2009 or 22.7 percent of all revenue, which equates to $2,622 per student spent on marketing.
- According to one study, “in the corporate world, marketing budgets typically represent between 4–12 percent of sales, and in the for-profit education sector, “marketing budgets can approach a whopping 40 percent of tuition revenue.” In contrast, nonprofit colleges and universities spend an average of one-half of one percent of their revenues on marketing.
- For the 30 educational companies examined by the HELP Committee, 54% of students who started in 2008-9 left without a degree by mid-2010. This translates to nearly 600,000 students leaving college without a degree.
- Students who attended a for profit college already account for 47 percent of all borrowers in default.

Attorneys General strongly support higher education as a way to improve the standard of living for Americans and help them reach their financial goals. However, federal taxpayers should not be asked to foot the bill for aggressive recruiting and deceptive sales tactics of colleges that have placed profits ahead of ensuring student success.

This legislation would apply to all institutions that receive federal student aid dollars, whether private, public or for-profit, and is a common sense measure to ensure that taxpayer money is being spent appropriately.

We respectfully request that you support this important legislation.

Sincerely,

Jack Conway
Kentucky Attorney General

Dustin McDaniel
Arkansas Attorney General
